Wedding Bells

OWEN — FUNK

Before an altar decorated with pink and white streamers in canopy-like fashion, Violet Mabel Funk exchanged marriage vows with Howard Glen Owen. The wedding ceremny was solemnized in Nordland church on Thursday, October 20, with Rev. W. P. Bell, Swift Current, officiating.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Funk, Beaver Flat, and the groom is the son of Mrs. A. Owen and the late Mr. Owen of Jarrow.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by Mrs. K. Benn of Swift Current. She chose for her wedding a white satin gown fashioned with lilly point sleeves and a net yoke edged with beaded trim. Her floor-length veil fell from a halo-type lace crown and she carried a bouquet of pink and white roses.

The groom was attended by his brother Ernie Owen of Irma, Alta.

Following the cermeony, a reception was held in the basement of the church.

The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth centred with a three-tiered wedding cake.

Guests from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. Bill Ewert, Lynn and Sandra, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Taylor Albert Jackson and Larry Funk, all of Irma, Alta.

The couple will reside at Lougheed, Alta.

The Rev. H. W. Inglis was in charge and gave a fine address urging all to remember, re-enlist and refrain in the service of Christ and in the Cause of Peace. The Irma choir gave two fine anthems.

The wreath was presented by Sam Congdon, Ralph Congdon, Steve Fucsko.

Keith Coffin read the names of those from Irma district who had given their lives in the two wars. As we have no bugler here the Last Post was played from a recording. Fortunately the weather was favorable and enabled some from quite a distance to attend this service.

AMA Will Press For Drivers' Tests

About one year ago, the AMA made strong recommendations to the government to inaugurate a system of examinations for those making application for a driver's license for the first time. Statistics gathered by insurance companies had shown that a large percentage of motor accidents were caused by youths who had little or no driving experience.

Last spring a report of a special legislative committee also recommended that tests be arranged for those seeking their first licenses to drive motor cars.

Action by the provincial government in regard to adopting of a system of driver's tests to reduce the number of highway accidents is being awaited, according to officials of the AMA.

In recent weeks, other Alberta organizations also have made similar requests to the government.

While provincial authorities have stated that the matter is under consideration, it appears that no definite decision has been reached.

In all probability, the AMA will discuss the situation and renew its demands when it holds its next annual meeting Nov. 19 in Edmonton.

It is recalled that a delegation from the AMA made strong representations on this matter to the provincial cabinet last May.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank all those who contributed in any manner toward the benefits which we recently received on behalf of our son, Douglas.

GERMINATION TESTS PARTICULARLY IMPORTANT THIS YEAR

The general frosts of early Sept. have beyond doubt injured the germination of this year's cereal crops, says A. M. Wilson, Field Crops Commissioner, Alberta Department of Agriculture. Mr. Wilson points out that oats in particular will be affected. He urges farmers to take every precaution by having seed samples tested for germination. Germination of oats is to takedlu shrdlu shrdlu rdlll is more seriously affected by frost than are other cereals. Injury to barley by frost is usually between that of oats and wheat. Frost lowers the grade of wheat and reduces the germination, but the effect on wheat is not as serious as that caused by the same amount of frost on oats and barley.

Farmers who desire germination tests of seed for their own use only, may take in a sample to their elevator agent for testing. Any grain to be sold as seed, however, must be subjected to the official Government test. This may be done by sending a two pound representative sample to the Plant Products Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Calgary, together with the required fee. The fee for a control sample certificate is $1.00. If a germination test only is desired, the charge is 75c.

Farmers who desire tests of their samples by the Plant Products Division are urged to get the samples in early. If left until later there may be considerable delay in testing due to the large number of requests submitted.

New School Buildings

THERE ARE MANY ELEMENTS which go into the making of a successful educational system. Good teachers are, of course, essential, but buildings and class room equipment also play an important part for both the pupils and the teachers. In the building of schools, as in many other matters, ideas have changed considerably in the past twenty-five years, and the design of a modern school is quite different to the school buildings constructed early in the present century. Until a short time ago there were relatively few new school buildings in Canada, and many of the old ones, which are still in use, are far below present standards of school architecture. In some of the larger cities, due to overcrowded conditions temporary buildings, never intended for schools, have been brought into use, and some have continued to house classes in spite of the fact that they are inadequate.

* * * * *

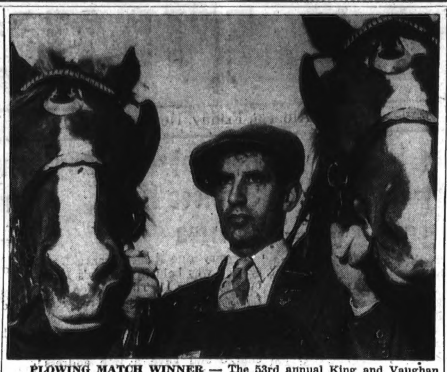

Did Not Build New Schools

There are several reasons why the number of modern school buildings have not kept up with the need for them. During the depression of the 1930's money was not available for building new schools, and this period was followed almost immediately by the Second World War, when lack of labour and materials curtailed all building operations not essential to the winning of the war. As result of these factors, few new schools were built in Canada for a period of nearly twenty years, and at the end of the war there was an accumulated need for a great many new school buildings. Since that time, however, there has been what is termed a boom in the construction of new schools, and according to "School Progress" a business magazine for Canadian schools, this boom has not yet reached its peak, but is expected to continue for another ten years.

* * * * *

New Programme Benefits Many

In Saskatchewan a total of $7,500,000 has been spent since the end of the war, and the department of education has proposed that another five million dollars be spent on school buildings in the next three or four years. In addition, the larger cities in that province have plans for expenditures of over one million dollars for new schools in the immediate future. Alberta cities are planning to devote over twelve million dollars to the building of schools, and Manitoba has a building programme which will involve several million dollars. Ontario has already spent $75,000,000 on school buildings since the war, and plans to spend that much again to bring accommodation in the schools there up to the desired standards. Large expenditures for this purpose are also being made in Quebec, the Maritimes and British Columbia. It is encouraging to know that the provinces are taking this interest in improving elementary and secondary school facilities here. Many schools are now used for adult education classes and for community activities after regular school hours, so not only the pupils, but the community at large is benefitting from the present extensive programme for the construction of new and modern school buildings.

PLOWING MATCH WINNER — The 53rd annual King and Vaughan township plowing matches were held recently just outside King, Ont., with 72 male and one female farmer participating in the big event. Competing for some $1,200 in prize money was Sheldon Walker, of Sharon, who made a comeback after a 15-year absence from plowing competitions.

Sale Of Oil Land Hits Peak

EDMONTON. — The Alberta provincial treasury had another $2,866,968 and statisticians had a record for their books as a result of sale by the Alberta Government of petroleum and natural gas rights on eight quarter sections of land in the Redwater and Leduc oil fields.

Big feature of the sale was the $918,662.67 paid by Tanner and Co. Ltd. of Calgary for a single quarter section, Parcel 64 in the northwest section of the Redwater field. The land is close to Imperial Egremont No. 1, a big producing well.

The price was the highest ever paid for a quarter section of land in Alberta, eclipsing the $902,800 paid by British American Oil Co Ltd. at the previous oil rights sale Aug. 25.

A syndicate composed of E. H. and C. R. Tanner of Calgary and their associates made the record bid. Only Canadian capital is behind the project. The Tanner brothers, who operate a nationally-known investment business in Calgary, said the land will be drilled and managed by a major oil company with full ownership remaining with the syndicate.

The Calgary firm also paid $677,287.17 for Parcel 65, a quarter section in the northwest corner of the Redwater field and near producing wells.

Coast Indians May Be First "White" Tribe

PRINCE RUPERT. — Metlakatla, picturesque and historic native village 10 miles west of here, may soon become the first "white" Indian village in Canada.

Culminating years of representations and negotiations, an enfranchisement board will convene at Metlakatla, Nov. 8 for a hearing on the application of the Metlakatla band for enfranchisement as a whole.

Compliance with the application would have the effect of making Metlakatlans "white" people in all legal and citizenship respects. They would completely cast off the status and all the implications involved as wards of the Federal Government under the provisions of the Indian Act.

While an amendment to the Indian Act, passed in 1933, provided for such conversion in status, Metlakatla is the first native community in Canada to make such an application.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

HIS CHILDREN

Where The City Boy Found Real Friends.

By WANDA MOORE

WITH his weight on both hands, Mr. Derrick leaned across the desk. "What did you say, Jeswold?" he bellowed.

"This is a stinky school." Jeswold showed his sneer to Mr. Derrick and then to the class.

"So, it's a stinky school, is it, Master Jeswold?" said Mr. Derrick, almost choking. "And what would you suggest we do about it, Master Jeswold?" His bushy eyebrows pointed like accusing fingers.

"Take it home for firewood," said Jeswold. "Country hicks don't need schooling anyway."

"And you?" asked Mr. Derrick above the classroom murmur.

"Oh, don't worry about me. My father would send me to a good school."

"He would, would he?" Mr. Derrick muttered. What was he going to do with this boy? He had been sneering for the three days he had been here. He was going to spoil everything that he, Mr. Derrick, had built up between him and the children. Sensitive Natalie, sitting frozen in her seat. Clarence who kept awake all day now and finished his arithmetic right along with the rest of them. Good children. All of them with the same hurt look.

Anger began to burn, anger that wanted to reach out and grab Jeswold and shake him until his eyes fell out and then toss him across the road and into the field beyond. His hands clutched the desk until the knuckles looked like they would push through the skin. He had grown very fond of these children he was teaching for the second year in this one-room school. He was not long on discipline for nothing. He would banish this boy. Now!

As he opened his mouth to speak, he saw Natalie wave her hand. "Yes, Natalie?" he said, trying to keep his voice steady.

She rose. "Mr. Derrick, sir. Perhaps if Jeswold could tell us about what he calls a good school, we would know what he does not like about ours."

Nonsense, Mr. Derrick almost snorted. He looked at Natalie again. Something in her face, bordering on compassion, stopped him. Even the angry murmur had stopped. He sank back into his chair. Matters could not be worse, so he turned to Jeswold. "All right," he said, "tell us about a good school."

Jeswold looked from Mr. Derrick to Natalie and back to Mr. Derrick. Bewildered.

"Speak up, boy, speak up," Mr. Derrick snapped.

"Yes, speak up, Jeswold," Clarence said, pulling the name out like a rubber band.

Jeswold straightened. "A good school is a big brick school in the city with clean sidewalks all around. It is a great big school. A great big school."

"You already said that," said Mr. Derrick.

"It has a lot of children in it. Lots of children. Crowds of children. And you don't have to know everybody. You can walk right past them. And they don't say . . ." Jeswold stopped abruptly, alarm in his face.

Mr. Derrick leaned forward. His anger had left him. He was looking into the face of a frightened child, and he did not know why because nobody had said anything to frighten him. No one had made any movement toward him. Everyone was listening as if he really had something to say instead of all this foolishness. "Jeswold, come here," he said softly.

Jeswold's eyes widened. "No," he cried. "I'm going." He sprinted for the door.

Mr. Derrick heard Natalie say, "Poor boy," and a murmur of voices as he shut the door gently behind him.

He started around the unpainted board school house, to the woodshed. He found Jeswold in a corner crying bitterly. He put one hand on the boy's shoulder. "Son," he said, "there is nothing to be afraid of here. Natalie knew that you didn't mean it. We all know it now. Come back with me. We will show you what friendship is."

Jeswold looked up through swollen eyes. "Friendship," he said. "Do you mean they would be friends with me with this awful name and what I said? No one wants to be friends with me."

Mr. Derrick nodded. "Come and see," he said.

When they walked in the room, Mr. Derrick said, "Jess really wants to be friends with us. I told him that all of you wanted to be friends with him, too."

"Oh, yes," breathed Natalie. "Sure, Jess," said the class.

My children, Mr. Derrick repeated proudly to himself, as he returned to his desk.

Alberta Gets New Coal Mine

MONTREAL — Alberta has a new open pit coal mining operation, with a potential output of 3,400 tons of domestic lump coal daily.

Forestburg Collieries, which recently acquired 1,800 acres in the Forestburg areas, about 100 miles southeast of Edmonton, has begun operations at the mine, a company official here states.

Company is investing $1.6 millions in the venture, a large part of it for new equipment. All the equipment, including an all-steel tipple with an electric dragline, is expected to be at work on the property by the end of October.

The new mine is on acreage formerly operated as an underground operation. Drilling tests carried on during the past year have revealed good quality coal in thick seams, company states. Coal is sub-bituminous with 9,500-10,000 BTU content.

Early Ambitions May Be Realized For Bob Solinger

The following despatch by B. Hesketh appeared recently in the Toronto Telegram, of Bob Solinger, young Saskatchewan country town boy, who has made the big-time in the hockey world:

"Out in Star City, Saskatchewan, a thriving town of 500, 100 miles from Prince Albert, they used to start 'em shooting pucks and smooker at a very tender age. That's how Bob Solinger, 10 at the time, happened to be understudying in the local emporium (a strictly social organization) one Saturday night about 12 years ago when Foster Hewitt was recounting by radio the exploits of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

"Solinger, who displayed the same glassy-eyed admiration when names such as Sweeney Schriner, and Hap Day were mentioned as the young fry of today do for Ted Kennedy and Turk Broda, paused in the process of chalking a cue and told the assembly that some day he'd be up in the big time.

"This statement raised a cloud of chorties from those present and drew marked disfavor from a gent two tables away who was jolted out of missing an easy black ball in the corner pocket by young Solinger's soliloquizing.

"So, like the guy who sat down at the piano, they laughed at Bob Solinger when he started to play. Today the left-winger rates a 14-carat chance to stay with his favorite hockey club, the Leafs, and it could be that the inhabitants of the same pool hall will hear the same Hewitt talking about the same Solinger this winter.

"Three years ago he was operating in Edmonton senior circles. Then he went to Cleveland. He had such a sensational debut winning the Dudley Red Garret award for being the outstanding rookie and piling up 69 scoring points, that all six clubs were drooling for him. Al Sutphin, he says, offered him $2,000 more than he could make by going to the NHL bigtop at the end of his first year.

"I like money," he said. "I stayed."

Last year, though his goal pot dwindled considerably, there were still four NHL clubs after him. Jim Hendy, New Baron president, traded him to Johnny Mitchell, of Pittsburgh Hornets, for three Leaf farm hands."

Trans-Canada Hiwy. Proposed Yellow-Head Route

(By Mayor Ainlay of Edmonton)

To the Delegates Attending the Annual Meeting of the Trans-Canada Highway System Ass'n. (Yellowhead Route)

It is with great regret that I am compelled to sever my connections with the civic administration of the City of Edmonton and this Association. I have enjoyed working with you even though it has added to a very busy life.

I am proud of the work we have accomplished. To some who believe that the route of the highway has been decided contrary to our plans, it may appear that our efforts have been in vain. This is not true. Thousands of Canadians are today aware of the feasibility of the Yellowhead Route because of our efforts. Irrespective of the name, the powers-that-be must realize that a road through the Yellowhead Pass must be built.

It is difficult to understand why the Federal and Provincial Governments would think of deciding on any particular route for such a major undertaking without first setting up some form of a board or commission to investigate the pros and cons of each route. No private individual would handle such a matter in this way. Politics or local pressures should not be thoe deciding factors. Cost of construction, maintenance, service to the most people, strategic value, etc., should be the prime concern of the Governments.

It is strange, too, in view of all that is said today, that the military have not been called into consultation. It is a well known fact that should another war occur we would never have the time to build another Alaskan Highway. It would be a comparatively easy matter to put our mountain railways out of commission and prevent access to the Pacific Coast. The highway we have suggested would give access to three Pacific ports, Vancouver, Prince Rupert and Anchorage.

It is generally admitted that Edmonton must be regarded by the Federal Authorities as a most important strategic centre. This is borne out by the fact of the great concentration of air forces in the City and the plans of the Federal Government to establish there the largest military depot in Canada. Negotiations for the site are now going forward. Under these circumstances it is tragic that there would appear to be no effect to co-operate with the military in providing, now, highway outlets to the Pacific by way of that City. Its development should be of prime importance to the Joint Defence Board. Will it again be a matter of "too little, and too late?"

We, as Canadians, have been proud of the position our country has attained in the councils of the nations. However I fear we still fail to act as a nation but rather as a chain of ten nations. The jealousy of some provincial governments over provincial rights prevent us from acting as a national unit in times of peace as we do under the compulsion of war conditions. The result is that so many of the needed reforms fall down between Federal and Provincial Governments. This is again exemplified by the decision that the route of the Trans-Canada Highway must be decided by the Provincial Governments. The manevring would be amusing if it were not so tragic. Surely the individual states in our southern neighbor have due consideration for state rights but this does not prevent the United States acting as a nation for national good. When are we going to grow up and fulfil our true stature?

This organization has always taken the position that if an independent Federal-Provincial Commission were empowered to obtain technical advice we would accept the decision. We have never said the highway must go through the Yellowhead Pass. We fully recognize that a Trans-Canada Highway is a must. The unity of Canada, the tourist industry, the development of inter-provincial commerce, the dignity of the nation, all demand at least one national highway and as far as Western Canada is concerned, eventually two or three such highways. Having in mind the many years this matter has been discussed and nothing accomplished, we have taken the stand that the route that could be built and maintained at the least cost and serve the country best should be the first one constructed.

The caravan which went through the Yellowhead Pass this year amply demonstrated the feasibility of the route. Here is a road upon which very little money has been spent and yet after a two day rain our cars went through with practically no difficulty. Since then several cars have used the route. There are practically no mountain conditions such as exist on the other routes. Everyone voted the trip a real pleasure. The scenery is all that could be desired.

The organization had movies, both black and white and colored, taken, and these will be available to show clearly the road conditions as at present.

We have authorized the preparation of a brief to be presented to the Royal Commission on Transportation. We do so because in this age of motor transportation, highways take their place alongside the railroads as a means of commercial development.

The proposed Trans-Canada Highway therefore should not be built with merely the tourist industry in mind. If this were true, probably any highway open during the summer months would suffice. Any highway which would involve tremendous maintenance for all year operation should receive the most careful consideration. The route we propose would in this respect be the least costly. Government bodies which are in charge of public funds should be concerned in giving the public the best service in every respect for the tax dollar. The mountain portion is an important link in this respect and should receive very special consideration. I am sure if the Government were contemplating the building of another transcontinental railway a very different attitude in regard to routing it would prevail.

A New Method of Research

The new Science Service Laboratories situated at Lethbridge were formally opened on September 23. Scientific research in all fields of human effort is going ahead these days in leaps and bounds; there is, of course, the same necessity for modern scientific research in agriculture as with anything else. Magnificent work has been done by Canadian agricultural scientists in past years. As a rule, however, each separate agricultural problem involving scientific research has been conducted more or less by individual scientists, or by a small group of scientists, attacking each problem at a number of individual points.

The conception of the new Science Service Laboratories, however, is to assemble at one point teams of different kinds of scientists so that many different types of scientific research effort can be concentrated on the solving of any one problem: it is considered that thereby quicker and better results will ensue. Today, therefore, the Lethbridge Laboratories are staffed by many different kinds of chemists such as plant and animal pathologists, bacteriologists, botanists, chemists, entomologists, microbiologists and others, all working as a team. Should this type of team work in agricultural research, as established now at Lethbridge, prove successful, then it is expected that a number of other similar Science Service Laboratories will be established throughout the Dominion.

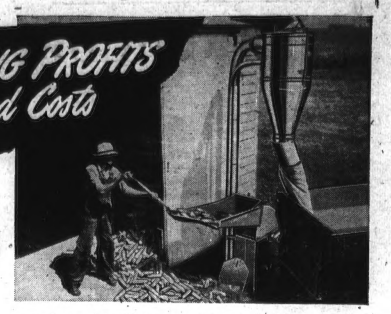

Twenty Barley Varieties in Use

A survey of barley varieties seeded over the Prairie Provinces has just been made by the Searle Grain Company as an addition to its annual survey of wheat varieties. The survey reveals that MONTCALM occupies 23.8 per cent of the acreage seeded to barley over the Prairie Provinces; O.A.C. 21, 18.6 per cent; OLLI, 11.4 per cent; PLUSH, 10.3 per cent; TITAN, 5.1 per cent and HANNCHEN, 4.9 per cent.

Over twenty varieties it is shown are in common use over the West. Far too many I venture to say myself. When we think that there are only ten wheat varieties in common use, and that one single wheat variety, Thatcher, occupies almost 60 per cent of the total acreage, it is quite obvious that wheat is required for the West, if true-to-variety barley crops are to be produced, is a variety that can be sown over wide areas with success, and that will be suitable for both malt and feed.

Certainly some of the present varieties could be eliminated. Many varieties result in mixed crops which do not mature evenly, and so do not produce the top grades of grain. A mixed crop, too, does not yield as high as a true-to-variety crop.

In addition to Great Britain, traffic moves on the left side of the road in Sweden, Ireland and India.

It's easy to see that lowering the cost of feed will increase your profits from feeding livestock . . . and that's just what happens when you grind your own feed with a John Deere Hammer Mill.

By using a John Deere to convert home-grown crops into feed which livestock relish, you save the cost of a custom grinder.

John Deere 10- and 14-inch Hammer Mills turn out more feed per hour with less power because they're big-capacity, light-running mills. The grinding unit consists of three sets of step-cut, reversible hammers mounted on a hardened-steel rotor, which runs on New Departure ball bearings for faster, easier grinding. See us soon about a time- and money-saving John Deere Hammer Mill.

U.N. Assembly Elects New Officers

The route of the Interprovincial Pipe Line Co.'s 1,150-mile line from Edmonton to the Great Lakes is shown above along with size, capacity, and other details. The company was sponsored by Imperial Oil. Total cost will be $90,000,000. Over the rocky, broken route to the Canadian lakehead, which is 120 miles longer, the cost would have been at least an additional $10,000,000 plus about $400,000 extra each year in carrying charges. Officials state this is prohibitive. The line to Superior takes the most direct route possible avoiding towns and other pipe line obstacles, thus providing the low-cost transportation necessary to bring western oil into eastern markets. It will aid the U.S. exchange situation by an estimated $30 millions a year by displacing foreign supplies. Merely to fill the line will take 1,838,000 barrels—64,330,000 gallons—and it will take 26 days for a barrel of oil to move from Edmonton to the terminus at Superior, Wisconsin. Here storage will be built to permit winter accumulation of oil. During the seven-month open season oil will be picked up by tanker for southwestern Ontario refineries. First oil should reach Regina in the fall of 1950 and movement to Superior is planned by early in 1951.

A Drive For Trade

MANY PEOPLE HAVE DREAMED of a state which would be economically self-sufficient and would not be dependent upon foreign trade for its welfare and prosperity. Actually, however, foreign trade is important to most countries today and around it revolve some of the most complex problems of our times. Canada is one of those countries whose prosperity depends upon buying and selling abroad. With less than one per cent. of the world's population, Canada has rich natural resources and great capacity for agricultural production. Such a relatively small domestic market makes it necessary for us to sell much of the output of our farms, factories, forests, mines and fisheries outside of the country.

* * * * *

Attention To Foreign Trade

The foreign demand for farm products has long been a matter of concern to the people of Western Canada. During the war, and in the period of rehabilitation in Europe the demand there for our grain and other farm products was great, but with production returning to normal in many places, Canada is giving increased attention to the building up of foreign markets. It has recently been announced that the Dominion Trade Department is giving thought to this matter and that plans have been made to expand the present service for holding and expanding markets for our farm products. The new policy calls for the creation of a branch of the Trade Commission to deal exclusively with the selling of Canadian wheat, eggs, bacon, cheese and fruit, and four farm specialists have been appointed to be trained for work in the Trade Commission Service. The new men appointed, W. F. Hillhouse of Saskatoon, D. B. Laughton of Nelson, B.C., W. J. Van Vliet of Quinton, Sask., and C. J. Small of Toronto, will be trained as agricultural specialists and will go to appointments abroad.

* * * * *

Will Look For New Markets

It will be the duty of these officials to send back information regarding the possibilities of securing new markets in countries which are interested, and able to buy Canadian farm products. Other officers, in countries where markets are already established are being instructed to make every effort to maintain and increase the present flow of Canadian agricultural products to these markets. This work is of the utmost importance to us here, for no matter what effort the farmer may put into the production of fine crops, he depends for his prosperity upon the ultimate sale of his products. These sales are made, for the most part, in other countries, and unless there is good demand for them there, prices fall. The progress of the drive being made by the Trade Commission at this time will be watched with interest by all who are concerned with the marketing of our farm products.

Canada's Bicycle Team Named

VANCOUVER. — Canada's three-man bicycle team for the British Empire Games in New Zealand next February was chosen.

R. W. Millman, Vancouver bicycle club official, said he had received a wire naming Johnny Millman and Lorne Atkinson of Vancouver, and Bill Hamilton of Oshawa, Ont., to the Dominion squad.

Alternate riders named by the games committee in Montreal were Eric Oland of Winnipeg and Real Lamothe of Three Rivers, Que.

Millman won the quarter-mile, third-mile, and half-mile events in the dominion bicycle championships here. He was later named Dominion champion for 1949.

Atkinson won the 10-mile distance race. Oshawa's Hamilton captured the 62-mile event in the British Empire Games trials here recently.

Manitoba Breeders Acquire Herefords

BRANDON, Man. — Back from a tour of the north-western United States, W. L. McGregor, of Brandon, reported here that Manitoba breeders had bought the finest animals offered at a sale of purebred hereford cattle at Britain, S.D., recently.

Top price at the sale was $13,500 paid by R. J. McClement, of Hayfield, for Th. Revelation 75th. Average price for 77 lots was $1,654 and the average for animals bought by Manitoba breeders was $2,853.

All the animals offered were from the famous Thorpe hereford herd.

ALL-OUT ATTACK ON 250-POUND BEAR

YORKTON, Sask. — Peter Brown had only a .32-calibre rifle and an axe, but he killed a 250-pound bear three miles north of here. He chased the bear into a hangar at the Yorkton airport and caught the animal with 12 shots while Bruin climbed out a window. He finished off the job with a blow on the head.

AERIAL PHOTOGRAPHY

REGINA. — Approximately 4,300 square miles of territory in Saskatchewan have been photographed aerially since August 16, 1949, by the provincial surveys branch, according to A. I. Bereskin, provincial controller of surveys.

The aerial photography concentrated mainly on the Big River and Fort a la Corne areas near Prince Albert for the completion of a forest inventory for the provincial forestry branch.

"Well," remarked the woman, "I don't think that is any time for a celebration."

CALGARY—The Alberta Government is prepared to pay one-half of the cost of public ward hospitalization in the province, based on 1949 ward rates, providing municipalities institute a scheme whereby patients would pay $1 a day while hospitalized.

The proposal, drawn up by Health Minister Dr. W. W. Cross, said the government would "pay out of the general revenue of the province a grant to each municipality sufficient to provide one-half of the cost of public ward hospitalization of all their ratepayers and dependents at the 1949 public ward rates minus $1 a day to be paid by the patient."

"Any increase in hospital rates for maternity and pensioners hospitalization over the 1949 rates is to be deducted from the government's share of the grants to municipalities.

THE TILLERS —By Les Carroll

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

LIFE IS HARD

A Fable By H. C. Suter

THE bridge looked very desolate and deserted in the fitful light of the street lamps. Parker was slowly passing the centre of the bridge, but was brought to a sudden stop as he observed a coat with a note pinned thereon. A couple of words flashed across his mind, and before he had taken hold of the note he had already uttered them, "Drowned himself". An unpleasant chill raced down his spine, as he read the note.

"Life is hard! Men are cruel. Why be unhappy and miserable? (signed) Casper."

Parker sighed. "Sensible creature! Life is certainly hard. Consider, for instance, Cohen! There's a man living on the fat of the land, as the saying is. I merely exist! I'm always hungry, cold, and, oh, how humiliated before my fellow men every day of my life. Life is indeed hard!"

With a supreme effort, Parker ripped off his coat, carefully inscribed his name beneath that of Caspar, and, clambering on the wall, plunged over.

The rippies had scarcely subsided, when Stevens came strolling along. His eyes were smitten by the two coats and the note.

At first he stood gazing at the coats and the water. Then, as he read the note, a shudder passed through his body. He sighed and muttered, "Drowned themselves!"

Then he began to ponder. "Sure, they're right! Life is not even fit for a dog to live! You slave away your days in business, lugging bags of food, or behind a counter selling merchandise, or peddling stuff that nobody wants to buy, or fixing up this and that for nobody in particular. The bosses grab all the profits, you get a pittance! Life is too hard to make it worth while living. You eat, drink and sleep—but you starve most of the time! They had the right idea. They've drowned themselves. I'm going to do the same!"

Stevens whipped off his coat and hat, placed his name to the note, and flung himself into the water.

Not long after, a student came strolling along. He spotted the clothing and the note.

"Drowned themselves!" As Langdon pondered their deed, a strange feeling of misgiving crept along his veins, impelling him to somber thoughtfulness. Then he laughed uproariously. "What do you know about that? If this isn't a dreadful example of what men call the capitalist system. Three lives ended. Snuffed out like a candle in the night, because life is hard. Who knows what good they might have done had they lived in the State of the future! Life is truly hard. I contend it is practically criminal to continue living when the proletariat's only prospect is the river! And I was on my way to the movies! Such a thoughtless fellow I am!"

He plucked out a pencil and added to the note: "Men are spiteful to me, so much so that I often become spiteful to myself. Give my books to my college comrade Geary. I owe the soda fountain at the corner of the college grounds for several sodas. Fight on for universal suffrage. (signed) Langdon."

Then he divested himself of his coat and plunged into the water.

Several minutes later, a river policeman trudged along. "Gosh!" he declared, as he gazed upon the coats, "The idea of those fellows taking advantage of my absence. I'll get into a nice bit of trouble over this."

He scratched his neck, swore lustily, and snatched at the note.

"Golly!" he whispered thoughtfully. "Why do they have to do a thing like this to me? One drowned, that wouldn't be much. But a whole crowd! Right from my bridge, too!"

He scratched his neck once more, still more thoughtfully, and cried: "Sooner the river than a thousand reprimands for the rest of my days in the service."

He unhitched his belt, flung off his coat and leaped into the river.

For a little while the bridge remained quiet, empty and peaceful. A gentle shower began to sprinkle the scene of the tragedy as though dropping tears of sympathy. Then a shabby figure rose from the bottom of a boat, slowly paddling it towards the bridge.

When Caspar reached the bridge, he pulled himself upon it, whistling with joy. He forthwith examined the coats and pockets.

"God be thanked! A bonanza at last! And in such hard times, too!"

He grabbed his own ragged coat from the pile, put it on, and, flinging the booty across his shoulder, swiftly plied his steps homeward.
